Background

Dynamic Systems Technology, Inc. (DysTech) provides behavioral health professional services to the Army National Guard. Our solution serves Soldiers and their Families through behavioral health assessments, crisis support, prevention education, and coordination with military and civilian resources. Our team supports the Guard's behavioral health mission by connecting individual assistance with the clinical documentation and readiness information needed to support continuity of care and informed leadership decisions.

The Challenge

National Guard Soldiers balance military responsibilities with civilian careers and family needs. Behavioral health concerns can affect personal wellness, relationships, and military readiness, requiring responsive support and coordination across military and community resources. The Guard needs qualified professionals to supplement its internal capacity, assess concerns, respond to crises, and support Soldiers and Families following traumatic events. These responsibilities extend beyond the initial interaction. Timely clinical documentation, medical records updates, and communication with authorized stakeholders support follow-up and give current information for readiness decisions. Delivering these services requires responsiveness, professional judgment, and careful protection of sensitive health information.

Our Solution Delivery Approach

Our team integrates behavioral health assistance, prevention, resource coordination, and medical records support through psychological behavioral health coordination and psychological health medical records assistance. Our professionals conduct intake and need assessments, respond to crisis calls, and monitor an off-duty resource line. Military and civilian agency coordination connects Soldiers and families with appropriate resources. Traumatic event management and postvention services extend assistance following critical events. Prevention education, skill-building, and consultation with commanders and healthcare professionals support informed responses to behavioral health concerns. Our team maintains Soldier medical records, documents contacts, and prepares clinical forms and activity reports. These services support continuity of care and readiness while protecting sensitive health information.
